8:00 Rx RECREATION

Narrator:

Robert Freidel, Supervisor
Dramatics and Music
Department of Municipal Research
Milwaukee, Wisconsin

The therapeutic values of recreation are so well known as to be taken for granted. But when creative recreation is planned for and by specific groups within the community, the results may be startling.

"Rx Recreation" is a demonstration of the application of music, dance and song to the problems of everyday living. Presented by the Department of Municipal Recreation of Milwaukee, several folk dance teams and amateur choral groups will illustrate folk art from Wisconsin's European and Early American heritage.

These presentations will illustrate how recreation can be a community project in which the prevention and treatment of illness are incidental, but important, by-products. Closely related is the fact that such activities often help to raise the stature of the individuals and groups which participate, thus contributing much to a better, healthier community.

We should always remember that human freedom is not a gift to man; it is an achievement by man, and as it was gained by vigilance and struggle, so it may be lost by indifference and supineness.
